

Finalizing the course...

Objectives

During the next two weeks we want to provide good prompts for engaging each other's projects, and we want to end the class well.

Weekly Assignments

For the next two weeks, the week of December 7th and the week of December 14th, we are asking for a different process than the one we've followed all term. Here's what we'd like:

- Check the list on the other side of this handout for the dates of final project posting (we've grouped people into two groups, with a couple of members of each small group presenting the week of Dec. 7th, and a couple presenting the week of Dec. 14th). Please post a link to your final project by midnight on the Monday your project is listed, through a blog post at the course site. The ning site will allow you to upload video, audio, as well as other formats.
- Make a substantial comment on the final projects of your small group members that are posted for the week in question. For most of you that will mean commenting on two projects, for some, only one. We want you, in particular, to comment on how the project integrates with the three elements of our triangle: context, tradition (including scripture), and experience. Please do so by Thursday at midnight.
- Then, by Saturday at midnight, comment briefly on all of the other final projects up for that week. Mostly we'd like you to comment on the opportunities the projects opens up, and/or the challenges it anticipates or evokes, for interpreting and confessing Christ in the midst of global media cultures.
- By December 21st at midnight, publish the final version of your project to Feautor.org, and send us the link (which we will put on a final page at the ning site).
- Shortly after that, Gary and I will post a "farewell" video to close out the class.
